National Grandparents Day

Marian McQuade founded Grandparents Day in nineteen-seventy-three in West Virginia. She spent five more years bringing all the states on board, and now Grandparents Day is a U.S. holiday.

Grandparents' Day will be Sunday, September 8th, 2013. So take the day to remember all the great things you have done for your family and how much your family appreciates you.

In Celebration of Grandparent's Day: We Are Spotlighting An Amazing Grandparent!

Kim is a proud grandmother of three beautiful kids ages 6, 8, and 9. Like most grandparents in the Kinship Program, Kim is more than just Grandma, but also the main caretaker. When she is not with the kids, she is at her fulltime job as an independent contractor that takes her out of the city frequently. With the help of her mother, who also lives with them, she is able to have all three kids in the same school and take the oldest to his football practices and games. Even though her house is busy and full, she know that she is the best thing in her grandkids' lives.

Back 2 School Tips

- Prepare your child for change. The beginning of the school year brings many changes.
- Discuss the unexpected. Prepare for situations that may not go as planned.
- Reintroduce routines. Over summer vacation routines may have changed.
- Teach and re-view school related "hidden curriculum." Go over the do's and don'ts of acceptable behavior.

Did you hear about the new changes for House Bill 130?

- There is no longer a one year expiration for the Power of Attorney (POA) or Caretaker Affidavit Authorization (CAA).
- If the parent revokes and/or removes the child, then the parent must put in writing, notify the grandparent and court.
- This gives the grandparent a 14 day period to 1) keep child in their home without filing anything at the court; 2) to file for custody with the court. If they file for custody, they may keep the child in their home until the court orders otherwise.
